

RICHARD DIXON was born in Coventry, attended King Henry VIII School, and graduated in Business Law at Lanchester Polytechnic, Coventry. He was called to the Middle Temple bar in 1978 and practiced as a barrister for nine years, specializing in criminal cases that also took him to the Court of Appeal and House of Lords (now the Supreme Court).

He left the law in 1989 and moved to Italy's Marche region with his partner, now husband, Peter Greene. During the early 1990s, they wrote guidebooks, including Italy on Backroads (Duncan Petersen, 1993); 3-D City Guide: Rome (Duncan Petersen, 1995); Charming Small Hotels: Tuscany and Umbria (Duncan Petersen, 1995); Central Italy: The Versatile Guide (Duncan Petersen, 1996) and Le Marche: The Gateway to Central Italy (Aerdorica, 2000).

His radio play Just Another Case was broadcast on BBC Radio 4 and BBC World Service in 1992. Daniel's Complaint, written for theatre, received professional readings.

He became a full-time translator in 1996. He has been a member of the Associazione Italiana Traduttori e Interpreti since 2009, an honorary member since 2021, and a member of the UK Society of Authors since 2012.

Published translations:

One of seven translators working between 2006 and 2009 on the first complete English translation of the Zibaldone di Pensieri by Giacomo Leopardi, edited by Michael Caesar and Franco D'Intino, published by Farrar, Straus and Giroux (New York) and Penguin Books (London), July 2013 (ISBN: 978-0-374-29682-7; 978-0-141-19440-0).

The Prague Cemetery, novel by Umberto Eco; published by Harvill Secker (London) and Houghton Mifflin Harcourt (New York), November 2011 (ISBN: 978-1-846-5549-1; 978-0-547-57753-1).

Shortlisted for the Independent Foreign Fiction Prize, 2012: Jon Cook (one of the judges) wrote: "With terse wit and engaging erudition, Eco's best novel since The Name of the Rose shows that the Holocaust was a catastrophe a long time in the making."

Nominated for the International Dublin Literary Award 2013: "Wonderful mix of a classic novel with a chilling thriller. A detailed historical novel about 19th century Europe chronicling the chaos of expanding international communication.

This dark tale is delightfully embellished with sophisticated and playful commentary on a tale by a master."

Robert Gordon in Times Literary Supplement, 3 February 2012: "Dixon does an extremely able job in containing the sheer flow of stuff and managed to hold on to the vigour and narrative thrust which are there in large parts of the original."

“A Convinced Bewilderment”, preface by Umberto Eco to Fabio Mauri: Ideology and Memory, published by Bollati Boringhieri (Milan), May 2012, pp.ix-xvi (ISBN: 978-88-339-2379-6).

Ardor, book-length essay by Roberto Calasso, published by Farrar, Straus and Giroux (New York) and Penguin Books (London) in November 2014 (ISBN 978-0-374-18231-1; 978-0-241-01176-8).

Pankaj Mishra in The New York Times, 19 December 2014: “Calasso’s prose is scrupulously lucid and elegant in Richard Dixon’s translation.”

Poems by Eugenio De Signoribus in Almost Island, Issue no. 11, December 2014.

Translation of an online interview with Roberto Saviano by English PEN on the publication of Zero Zero Zero, July 2015.

Poems by Silvia Bre and Franco Buffoni for Prix Italia 2015, broadcast on Radio Tre, 23 September 2015; Testo a Fronte, Issue no. 53, published by Marcos y Marcos (Milan) 2015, pp.44-51 (ISBN 978-8-871687-3-08).

“The Last Superstition” by Roberto Calasso, in Res: Anthropology and Aesthetics (Book 65) (ed. Francesco Pellizzi), published by Peabody Museum Press, New York, August 2015, pp.403-407 (ISBN: 978-0-87365-866-9).

Numero Zero by Umberto Eco, published by Harvill Secker (London) and Houghton Mifflin Harcourt (New York), November 2015 (ISBN: 978-0-544-63508-1; 978-1-910-70108-9);

John Florio Prize, 2017: commended translation: “Richard Dixon captures brilliantly the intricacies and surprises of Umberto Eco's unpredictable narrative, the richness and playfulness of its language [...] giving us a lively, thoroughly enjoyable reading experience.”

Alberto Manguel in The Guardian. 26 November 2015: “Numero Zero has been brilliantly translated into English by Richard Dixon, who has been able to catch the changes of voice and tone of the characters and find English equivalents for the Italian jokes and wordplay.”

The Art of the Publisher, by Roberto Calasso, published by Farrar Straus & Giroux (New York) and Penguin Books (London), November 2015 (ISBN: 978-0-374-18823-8; 978-0-141-97848-2).

Italian Contemporary Poets: an anthology – ed. Franco Buffoni, published by the Federazione Unitaria Italiana Scrittori, February 2016 (ISBN 978-88-99773-09-0).

Translations of poems by: Nanni Balestrini, Silvia Bre, Franco Buffoni, Giuseppe Conti, Roberto Deidier, Eugenio De Signoribus, Gianni D’Elia, Biancamaria Frabotta, Bruno Galluccio, Vivian Lamarque, Francesca Matteoni, Aldo Nove, Elio Pecora, Andrea Raos, Antonio Riccardi, Mario Santagostini, Gian Mario Villalta, Cesare Viviani, Valentino Zeichen

Reflections on Pain by Umberto Eco, published by ASMEPA (Bologna), February 2016 (ISBN 978-88-97620-31-0).

The First German Philosopher: The Mysticism of Jakob Böhme as Interpreted by Hegel by Cecilia Muratori (translated with Raphaëlle Burns), published by Springer, March 2016 (ISBN 978-94-017-7338-6).

Distant Light by Antonio Moresco, published by Archipelago Books (New York), March 2016 (ISBN 978-0-914671-42-8).

Shortlisted for the American Literary Translators Association Italian Prose in Translation Award 2017: “Dixon’s translation captures the cadences of Moresco’s prose and his lush, vivid imagery, while also successfully navigating between the narrative’s tangible world and its challenging, metaphysical reflections.”

Shortlisted for the International Dublin Literary Award 2018: “This is a literally haunting story in which the past and the present merge into the surreal, yet the natural scenery and the passing of the seasons are evoked with complete realism. A gorgeously lush translation that does justice to the lyricism of the original.”

Stiliana Milkova in Reading in Translation, 10 April 2018: “Dixon’s translation works wonders in English, while preserving the text’s own magic. [...] Life and death, rapture and agony, sky and earth, screeching and silence [are] all experienced and delivered through the narrator’s sharp eye and environmental sensibility, in Dixon’s morbidly evocative language.”

Dante: The Story of His Life by Marco Santagata, published by Harvard University Press, April 2016 (ISBN 978-0-674-50486-8).

Tim Parks in the London Review of Books, July 2016: “Elegantly translated...”

John Banville in The New York Review of Books: “Richard Dixon’s English translation is wonderfully supple and elegant.”

Crossing the Rubicon: Caesar’s Decision and the Fate of Rome by Luca Fezzi, published by Yale University Press in November 2019 (ISBN 9780300241457)

The Celestial Hunter by Roberto Calasso, published by Farrar, Straus and Giroux and Allen Lane in April 2020 (ISBN 978-0374120061; 978-0241296745).

A. E. Stallings in The New York Times, 28 April 2020: “That these stylish sentences come through with such verve in English — one is almost never aware the book is a translation from the Italian — is due in no small part to the translator, Richard Dixon.”

Boyd Tonkin in the Financial Times, 11 May 2020: “At best, [Calasso] writes like a poet, not a professor, in glinting, enigmatic nuggets of narrative finely voiced by his translator Richard Dixon.”

Patrick Curry in the Times Literary Supplement, 6 November 2020: “well translated by Richard Dixon.”

The Lehman Trilogy by Stefano Massini, published by HarperVia in June 2020 (ISBN 978-0062940445).

Dwight Garner in The New York Times, June 29, 2020: “Massini’s original text, a novel in verse, has now been issued in English for the first time, in a translation by Richard Dixon. It’s a monster, a 700-page landslide of language with no obvious speaking parts. But it’s apparent right from the start that Massini is the real thing. His writing is smart, electric, light on its feet.”

How to Spot a Fascist by Umberto Eco, translated with Alastair McEwen, published by Vintage in August 2020 (ISBN 978-1787302662)
